A fundamental base of civilization in the inviolability of property; but this is in no wise inconsistent with the right of society to regulate the exercise of the artificial powers which it confers upon the owners of property, under the name of corporate franchises, in such a way as to prevent the misuse of these powers. Corporations, and especially combinations of corporations, should be managed under public regulation. Experience has shown that under our system of government the necessary supervision can not be obtained by State action. It must therefore be achieved by national action. Our aim is not to do

The welcome news came on Monday that the Irish members of Parliament turn to the House of Commons at the call of John Redmond, the recognized Irish leader, and there aid in the passage of the educational bill, now being considered before the House of Lords. However, it is more than probable that the educational hill will not be passed in its present form. On this subject Count Arthur Moore, writing in the Irish Weekly Independent and Nation, says:

"The situation now is briefly this: Serious, if not vital, amendments have been accepted:

After matters of routine had been disposed of the members resolved that it was up to them to do something to show the Irish-Americaus outside of the society that they were alive. After a full and free discussion it was determined to give a hall and reception at an early date, probably on Washington's birthday, as that is three days before the opening of Lent. The members of the Irish-American Society are all family men and they will not permit of anything less than a high-class affair. Tom Tarpey, Joe Nevin, President Flynn, Thomas P. Walsh, Pat. Welsh, Dennis J. Heffernan, Dennis Minogne, James O'Connor, Steve Mc-Elliott, Tom Conway, Mike McGillicuddy and Tom Claire were appointed a committee with full power to make arrangements for the ball.

Years ago the Sarsfield Rifles, a most Division 3, of Louisville, was present amendments have been carried if the lation of this city, held annual halls on St. Patrick's night. The ball opened with a grand march to Irish martial music, than which there is none better. There were waltzes, schottisches, polkas, etc., for the younger element and plenty of jigs, reels, horupipes, etc., for the elders or for all who cared to take part. Now this is just the kind of a ball the Irish-American Society proposes to give and with this committee to draft the plans It will certainly he a success. The committee will make its report on December 18, when the other members will be called upon to do their part in backing up the

TOO MUCH PARTISANISM.

That there is little respect for law or authority or confidence in any one, especially public officials, is a deplorable fact fraught with danger to our peace, safety aud future as a government. Any policy advocated by a political party or individual, every act and utterance of public officials, even decisions of Judges, are praised or condemned, not on their merits, conformity to law, equity or the public good, but wholly from partisan standpoint; and to maiutain such view the subject is no infrequently misconstrued, if no absolutely misrepresented. To affect public opinion is the purpose, and to attain or maintain individual or political interests, regardless of right or wrong, is the object. The result is not only confusion as to the right or wrong of it, but growing disrespect for and loss o confidence in those who administer government, exercise authority. pass laws and control public affairs.

A case iu point is the clamor over three decisions by Louisville Judges of important constructions of law, relative to gambling and prize-fighting. What is the law? is about the most important question upon which Judges pass, and to the people who favor upholding the law such decisions are the guide as well as protection. That Judges may and do err is a fact, and a proper criticism of their decisions is not only proper, but tends to rectification of error and correct final interpretation. But when such criticism, favorable or otherwise, ignores the law, arguments and authorities, does not consider it from a legal standpoint, but wholly from the basis of interests beuefited or injured by the decision, it is partisanism of a kind tending to outlawry, and its purpose is to attain success for the interest involved, legally if possible, but success at any odds. It is indeed a serious matter to charge or intimate that a Judge is influenced in his decisions by partisan or sinister motives; that he decides the law to be other than he really believes it to be after a fair hearing, due study and consideration; and the editors and prominent officials and attorneys, who generally originate such insinuations and write such criticisms, do not sincerely believe it. If they did, such a Judge would most certainly be charged directly aud in the proper way with malfeasance in office, and his impeachment and removal demanded and insisted upon. That they do uot pursue such a course only the more clearly proves that their real purpose is to influence the public that they may in some way further their selfish or party interests by upholding their own interests or hampering Filipinos." those of their opponents. Partisanism, whether it be of politics or the individual, is becoming too generally the basis of approving or condemning public matters that affect not only one party or one class of people, but the whole people of all parties and all classes.

oted and false means, to array the manufacturing and commercial interests against labor unions. These 'manufacturers'' are well known for their methods and can be pointed out in every community, and to the credit of "the manufacturers of the United States" this element is quite small. We have not the space to note the general balckguardism contained in this sheet, including a sermon by a minister, if you please, but the following in reference to the President of the United Mine Workers is a sample of the whole:

"Bishop Potter calls Mitchell one of the finest men he ever met-judging him, I suppose, on the accepted ecclesiastical basis when he dominates him one of the finest. Others, big people and small, in the coal mining country, call him the most dangerous demagogue which this country has ever known, pointing led out the fact that he is descended from a long line of Jesuits, and that he has maintained for the last few vears a most delicate and difficult position at the hands of his hundreds of thousands of foreigners by means of a kind of indescribable mixture of boldness, cunning and nsincerity."

John Mitchell has shown what kind of a man he is during the anthracite troubles, and he has earned the respect of the American people generally, including manufacturers notwithstanding the fact that he is an Irish Catholic descended from ong line of Irish Catholics.

They advertised for labor at twelve cents per hour nine hours per day-reversing the English order of nine cents per hour, twelve hours per day The English contractors chuckat the prospective result of financial loss to the Yankee contractor, taking the work cheaper, increasing wages 33 per cent. and reducing the day 25 per cent. But their best workmen left them to work for the Americans, and they are short in laborers. But what aggravates them is observation proves that the American contractors' shorter day and better paid laborers do more work in nine hours than the English contractors' laborers do in twelve. The American contractors will all make money, and worse still, the English laborers are beginning to agitate for shorter hours and more wages Against this innovation the English employers are seeking to unite and look about for some means of checking, lest it revolutionize the industries, to the curtailing of profits, depression of business and bankruptcy of the manufacturers and contractors.

List to the banshee's song! It floats the whole night long Across the wooded glen, The native log and fen; It swells the sighing breeze Through hawthorn bush and trees, That bow their heads and sigh As the plantive aong goes by.

Oh! hear the song of the lark As it lifts from the thicket dark So clear, so aweet and true; As it sails to the heavenly blue It pours from its warbling throat An endless, joyous note, As an angel's song were given To lose its adagio in heaven.

Oh! the glorious song of the thrush, Hiding away in the brush! In his sombre coat of brown As he warbles away from town, To the copse where the fairies dwell, Mid the haws that he loves so well, To the fort on the top of the hill, Neglected but hallowed atill.

These are the songs we hear So aweet to the listening ear; Their memories softly stir The exile's heart afar; But oh! the sougs of the Isle That so usany a grief beguile, That envelop the heart with glee, Are the dearest of all to me.

Happy and innoceut, gay With a blitheness that comes to stay Till sorrows mournful keeu And more solemn face is seen; Then the pleasure and gladness Oh! so quickly turn to sadness And the anguish of the soul Grows as deep as oceana' roll,

But the lute is not unstrung. Though its silence may be long; Still its golden strings resound When a tender touch is found: That will waken all the glory Of the beauteous old-time atory; Small wonder is it the exile longs For his Island and her songs.
